GATEWAY...
1939...

Foreward

The youngster scampering through these pages typifies the intangibles of our college life. There is a side of college totally strange to him. The lectures and labs we have attended, the talks in assemblies, have left us partially filled mentally, and many of us have taken the first step toward our chosen work.

But the other side, the life of clubs and meetings and dances, is that stressed within these pages. And young Junior College is completely at home in its atmosphere.

There are tangible memories which will remain with us: those ever-present five o'clock meetings; conversations in the refectory and hamburgers across the street; the organization of Rabbit Runners; Dr. Mauelshagen trucking.

But more than these grin-bringing recollections have been out extra-curricular activities. These clubs are small replicas of those we will join later; these college publications are fore-runners of those we will write for later. Some of us have been given a push along the roads of our professions, and some have made social contacts which will continue giving us pleasure and profit.

THE GATEWAY, by bringing to mind this phase of our receding college days, endeavors to be more than a glorified scrapbook. It hopes to remind also of things to come.

A gateway leads in both directions, and must be left as well as entered by.

Dedication

TO DR. GEORGE McINTOSH SPARKS,

Whose Great Humor, Keen Interest in the Student Body and its Activities, and earnest endeavor to make the Junior College a constantly improving institution will be long remembered,
We Affectionately dedicate this, the first volume of

THE GATEWAY.

Through the effort put forth to compile this volume, through the snowstorm of pictures, cartoons and typewritten pages, has loomed for us one objective: to give you a volume containing in its pages some part of the spirit of this college. It is an informal school, and this is an informal annual.

We have tried to bring together the outstanding events of the year; that you may be reminded in the future of pleasure and companionship you have known.

It has been an enjoyable undertaking.
